2.1 Barcode reader – retrieve information from Google Books™ or Open Food Facts

The barcode reader can retrieve information from Google Books™ and/or Open Food Facts for a detected barcode. To do this, activate the corresponding option in the barcode reader. After a successful search, the found information will be displayed in the results list.

For external search hits, clicking on the list entry will open the corresponding website in your device's default browser to display more detailed information about the detected barcode.

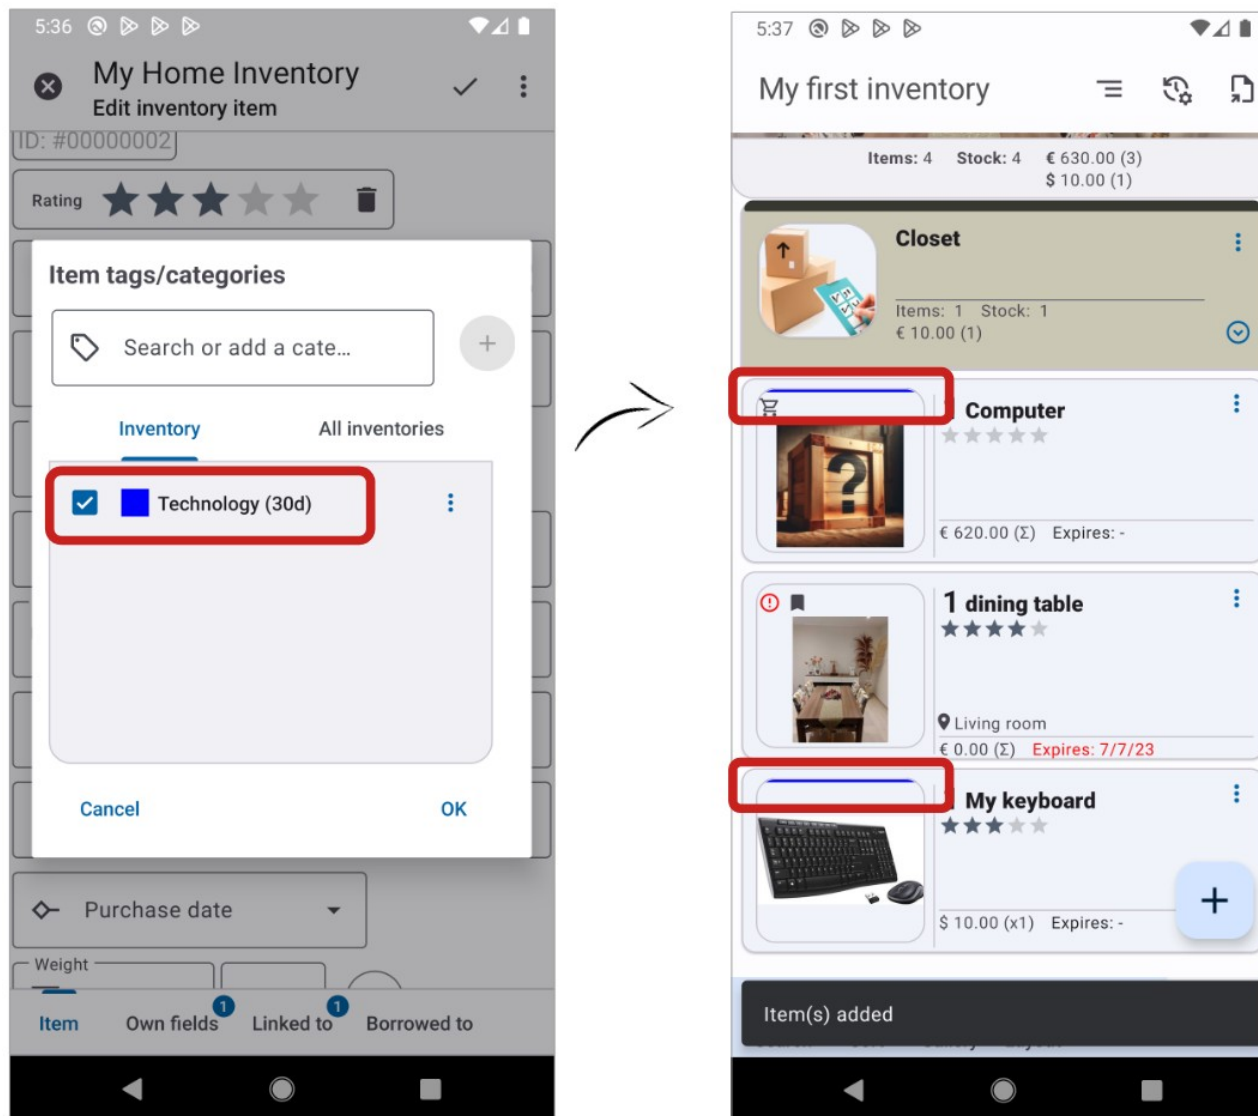

You can also save individual search results as a new article. Some basic information will be transferred in the process.

All search results for the recognized barcode are displayed here.

2.2 Show category colors in the article list

If you assign a category with a color code to an item, this color will be displayed in the item list.

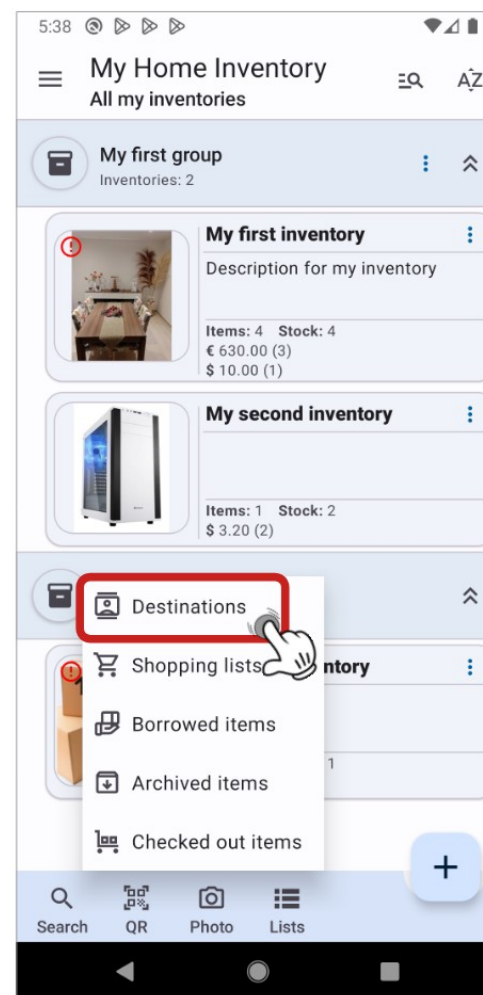

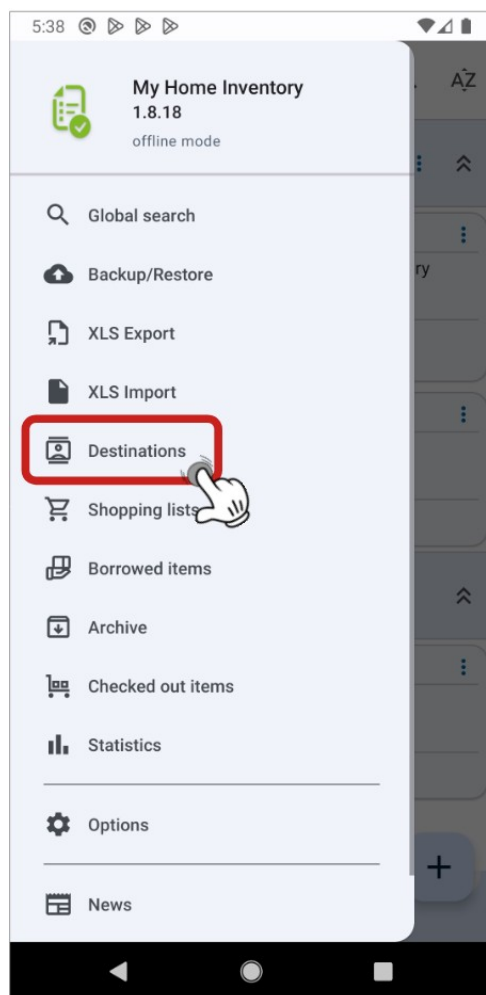

2.3 Destinations for articles / Article recipients

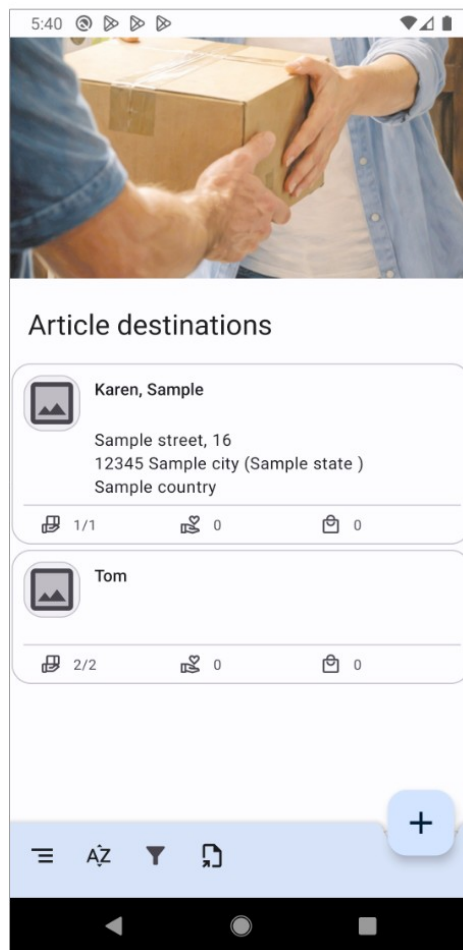

Recipients of items are individuals, companies, or institutions that receive items from your inventory. When lending, giving away, or selling items, you select the appropriate recipient in each case.

2.3.1 Recipients list

You can view the recipient list via the main menu.

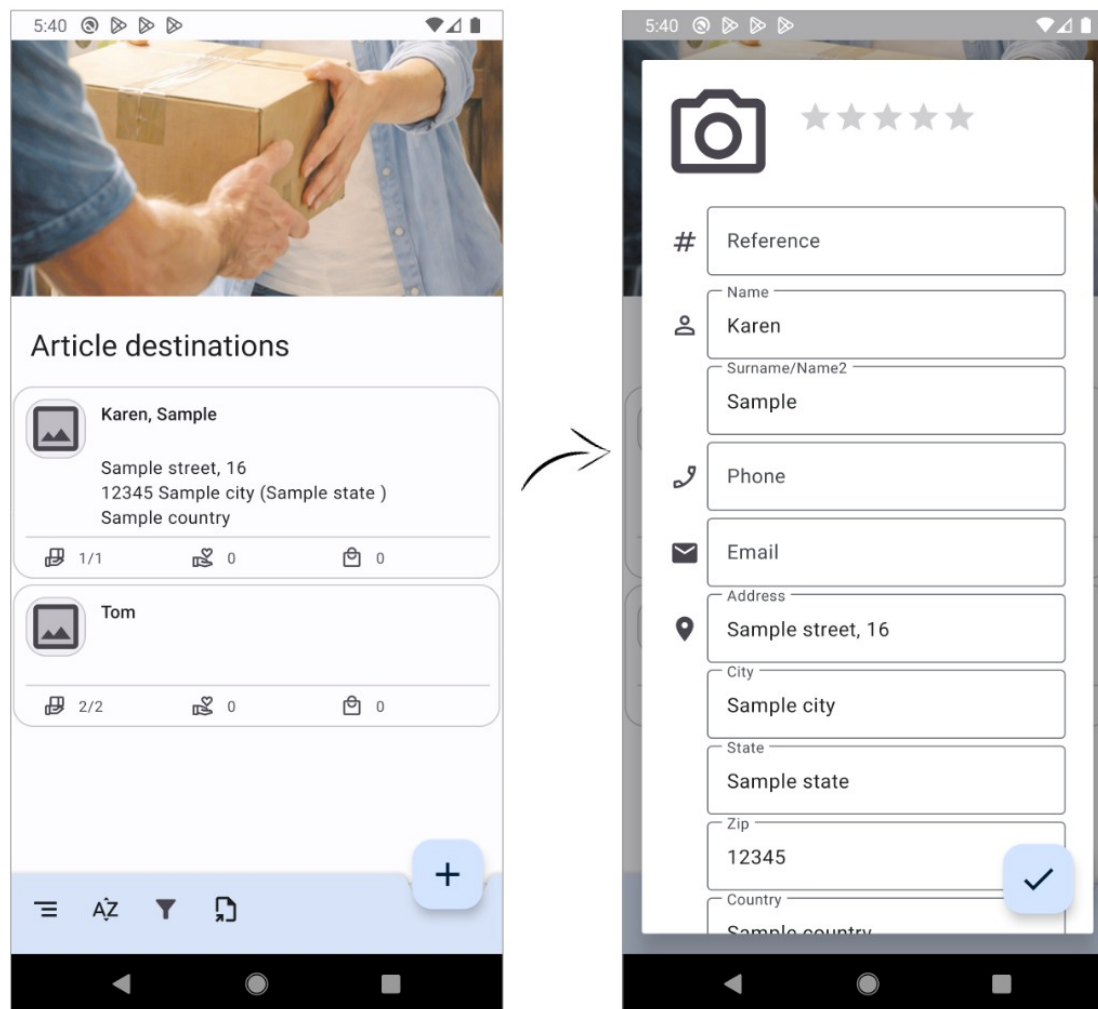

The list displays all existing recipients. Each entry also shows the number of loans, donations, and sales associated with that recipient.

You can sort the list alphabetically by recipient name, group by the first letter of the name, search for entries, and export the list to Excel. Use the action bar at the bottom of the screen for this.

2.3.2 Create, change, or delete recipient data

For each recipient, some essential data can be saved. To add a new recipient, click the plus symbol in the recipient list. To edit a recipient, click the corresponding list entry or swipe the entry to the left. To delete a recipient, swipe the entry to the right. Please note that if the recipient is still associated with loans, sales, etc., this data will also be deleted. The app will display a warning in this case.
